Round River Productions, United States, 2010. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 198 x 130 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Through a series of notes, letters and e-mails, award-winning author and recording artist Bill Harley traces a student's path through his school years from Kindergarten to high school graduation. Rhonda Bennet's communication with her son's teachers gives readers a window into the successes and failures, joys and sorrows of a boy, his mother, and the teachers they encounter. The communications are sometimes brief, sometimes extended, and range from the mundane (the Kindergartener who can't tie his shoes) to the deeply moving (the loss of a friend). With humor and insight, Harley gives us an idea of what is possible when parents and teachers are willing to communicate. These letters and notes will remind every parent and every teacher of their trials, challenges and surprises, and reaffirm the value in reaching out. As Harley notes in his introduction, it takes both the teacher and the parent, working together, to help a child through school and life. In a very readable, humorous and touching way, Harley asks all of us to be our best selves. I love this lovely little book. I laughed and cried along with Tyler's mother and teachers as they worked together to mentor this young person. Amy Dickinson Bestselling author, Syndicated columnist Ask Amy Bill Harley has found a story that shows us how good we can be, if we just let it happen. George Wood Principal, Middle and High Schools, Stewart OH Author, Time to Learn Harley's keen understanding of the promise and possibility of clear and careful communication should be a lesson to us all.
