In the semiarid regions of the West the sensible temperature during the summer months often is 20 to 30 less than the air temperature, which condition is due to the extreme dryness of the atmosphere. In the more humid regions of the eastern part of the country such extreme differences can not occur. Gradually the publication of sensible temperatures has been extended until now the readings of the wet-bulb thermometer appear on all published maps and meteorological tables of the United States Weather Bureau issued from its many stations. Over four million maps are posted annually in conspicuous places in the important cities and towns of the country, and the tables...
