Not illustrated. 1796 Excerpt: . . . minds of the female, human and brute, . in the state of pregnancy, was then considered, and all the various instances of monstrous productions. I have heard of a duckling, which, to the surprize of a grave family, waddled from its nest with a long serpentine tail instead of its natural rump. This was. readily resolved into a fright-the mother-duck took, at finding, when it went once to lay, a snake coiled up in the nest, as was a real fact. I consulted the learned, but found the doctrine of terror and fancy totally exploded. I then consulted the Memoirs of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Brobbitignag; and, to my inexpressible fatisfaction, found that the opinion of that illustrious body coincided with my own: so I put down this uncommon accident as no more than a Relplum Scalcath, or, in the modern phrase, a lusus. nature. . Fisbe. The tides recede here so very fir as to deny us any variety of fish. The species most plentiful are of the flat kind, such as flounders, a few plaice, small soles, and rays. Dabs visit us; in November. Smear Dabs, Br. Zool. iii. N;06, also visit our sea; and in the last year was taken that rare species of flounder the whiff, the figure of which is given in the British Zoology, N3 m. That turbot of a large size are found in our neighborhood, is evident; twice in my life I had one brought to...
